The Silk Route Bike Tour: Is it the greatest journey in the world? The company calls it 'the longest, hardest, highest, hottest, coldest bicycle tour in the world'. In nineteen weeks, you travel over 12,000 kilometers through seven different countries and have the most exciting ride of your life.

'A thousand years ago people went by camel and did about twenty-five kilometers a day,' says Nate Cavaleri, one of the Silk Route Tour staff. 'But on a bike you do twenty-five kilometers in an hour', and along the way you see some of the most beautiful places in the world.

From Shanghai, you go across Asia, through Iran and arrive in Istanbul, Turkey, in the end. You travel across the desert of China and cycle the Pamir Highway to over 4,600 meters, across the 'Roof of the World' in the mountains of Tajikistan. On the way, there are villages, markets and ancient buildings.

At night, you stay in ancient roadside hotels or in camps. A chef cooks dinner for about half of the 133 days; on other days cyclists can eat in local restaurants or shop in local markets for their food.

One cyclist blogged, 'The best thing was the friendliness of the people.' And the worst things? 'The snow and the cold in the Pamirs.'

So, is it the greatest journey in the world? Cyclist and blogger Miles MacDonald thinks so. 'The Silk Route is a true expedition. It is long and difficult, but it is such an amazing experience that you arrive in Istanbul a completely changed person.'
